Thank you for your interest

You're invited

On behalf of Maritime Industry Australia Ltd (MIAL), I am extremely proud to invite you to join with us in producing a vital event for our industry.

When I first had the idea to run an event exclusively focused on maritime decarbonisation, it was because there was so much happening in this space it was almost impossible to keep up.

My reasoning was simple: if I was finding it a challenge to be across the rapid changes and developments then perhaps others were in the same boat. From the very first summit this proved to be the case and in just three short years, MIAL has been able to foster tremendous interest and support from those keen to engage in the conversations on how to reduce maritime emissions.

As we prepare for our 5th and biggest summit yet, these conversations have never been so important. The policy, regulatory, and political landscape is evolving apace, and this event will confront the new reality head on.

Thank you for supporting what promises to be a bold and vital summit that once again brings our industry together with energy producers and government to exchange ideas and prepare for the future.

Angela Gillham - MIAL Chief Executive Officer

About MIAL

Maritime Industry Australia Ltd (MIAL) is the national maritime peak body. We ensure our industry is heard.

A prosperous Australia with strong, sovereign maritime capability - this is the vision that drives our work, our engagement, and how we invest our energy and resources. As an island-continent, with a rich maritime history, it is a simple matter of fact that maritime success is Australia's success.

This summit will bring together key players from industry and government to hear, learn, and share expertise and innovation. It is also a unique opportunity to understand the potential impacts of changing geopolitical scenarios around the world along with the policy and regulatory developments that will soon be delivered.
